

The Importance of Project Culture in Achieving Quality Outcomes in Construction

Rob Thomas, Marton Marosszeky, Khalid Karim, Steve Davis, & Denny McGeorge (in Proceedings of the 10th Annual Conference on Lean Construction, edited by Carlos T. Formoso and Glenn Ballard)

This paper presents a review of developments that have led to current construction quality management philosophies. The primary factors responsible for the relatively poor quality outcomes currently achieved by the sector are reviewed and the influence of bureaucratic and hierarchical management systems are considered. A study of the relationship between project cultures and the quality of outcomes on thirteen construction sites is presented.